'I was thrilled by the very careful editing of the Great Debates criminal law book.'

Jonathan Herring, author of Criminal Law, published by Palgrave Macmillan

'I must say you have done a fantastic job – something that was not easy to do but has been executed with intelligence, sensitivity and very good judgement.'

Erik Näslund, author of Rolf de Maré, published by Dance Books (Sweden)

'I have to say that I am delightfully impressed by your work and for the first time since I started the book I feel excited.'

Merle Stanley, author of No Time to Weep, self-published

'... compared with most proofs, and I must have seen thousands, yours were amazingly clear of the ghastly typos that grow like weeds elsewhere. And don't think I didn't notice the number of times you had cleaned up little inaccuracies I had spilled into the text, or added crucial bits of information to otherwise unremarkable observations, or slipped me a key when I had handcuffed myself to facts that were about to become ex-facts. None of these has gone unnoticed, or unappreciated.'

Donald Carroll, author of Surprised by France, published by Survival Books

'I should thank you for saving me from so many embarrassing lapses in this piece. It's good to see that someone is taking the editorial process so seriously – this is quite rare nowadays, even in leading journals. Your comments are all very much to the point, and well made.'

John Coakley, contributor to Social Compass journal, published by Sage Publications

'I would like to thank you for all your help, hard work and dedication on our secondary ESO project, My Life. We are really pleased with the results. The feedback received so far from secondary school teachers and our Sales department has been extremely positive and very promising! Thanks again for all your hard work and we look forward to working with you on future projects!'
